NORTHERN TANZANIA CLASSIC SAFARI

Maswa Game Reserve

Located along the southwestern boundary of the Serengeti National Park, this unique wildlife reserve is home to a wide variety of game species – but is particularly renowned for its prides of lion, frequent sightings of leopard and vast herds of Cape buffalo.

The Maswa Game Reserve is an important component of the southern Serengeti ecosystem, being one of the corridors for the summer migration of huge herds of wildebeest and zebra which pass through in January, February and March feeding on the new growth of grass that appears after the short rains. It is also a dry season refuge for a large numbers of game species seeking water in the springs and pools formed in the sand rivers .

The plains game species - Roberts and Thomsons gazelles, greater kudu, impala, roan antelope, klipspringer, topi, hartebeest, herds of eland and zebra are all frequent this reserve.

The landscape can be described as classic East African savannah - open short grass plains interspersed with the flat topped acacia tortilis , whistling thorn and majestic granite outcrops.

Lake Natron

Wildlife native to the Rift Valley floor include the rare lesser kudu, gerenuk, fringed-eared Oryx, East African impala, Grant's gazelle, and Thomson's gazelle. Zebra , wildebeest and giraffe are ubiquitous.

The landscape here is flat topped acacia savannah dominated by lofty rain forest clad mountains unique to this part of Masailand .

The lake itself is a natural soda lake fed by hot springs and is overlooked by the volcanoes Mount Gelai and Mount Lengai, the holy mountain of the Masai. It attracts an abundance of bird life including thousands of flamingos.

Throughout these semi-desert areas, the indigenous Masai people maintain their traditional nomadic lifestyle, herding their livestock as they have done for thousands of years.

This area is tsetse fly free and, generally speaking, mosquito free. It is warm during the day, but it is often cool in the evenings. At higher altitude on the mountains – up to 9000ft, it can get very cold, cloudy and it may rain occasionally. The inhabitants of the rainforest on these mountains include Masai bushbuck, Cape buffalo and leopard.

It is possible to visit Masai homesteads or “manyattas” and acquire traditional arts and crafts.
